

Is medical marijuana permitted in your state, and if so, how does that impact workers' compensation, if at all?

Newsletter
Second Quarter 2019

About Hennessy & Roach, P.C.

We're a Chicago based law firm with additional offices in Springfield, Illinois; St. Louis, Missouri; Green Bay, Wisconsin; Milwaukee, Wisconsin; Indianapolis, Indiana; Overland Park, KS; and Omaha, Nebraska.

Founded by Thomas G. Hennessy and James P. Roach on May 17, 1993, the firm continues to grow.

The firm handles insurance defense matters throughout the States of Illinois, Missouri, Wisconsin, Indiana, Nebraska, Iowa, and Kansas

Check out our new website!
www.hennessyroach.com

View our profile on LinkedIn

As always, if you have any questions please feel free to reach out to me, or any of our 8 offices, and we will respond as soon as possible. Looking forward to further serving you in 2019.

Thank you,
Tom Hennessy

- How should employers handle employees with pre-existing medical conditions who are using legally prescribed medical Marijuana?
- How should an insurer handle an injured employee who has been legally prescribed medical marijuana for treatment within a workers' compensation claim?

The answer varies throughout jurisdictions so the team at Hennessy & Roach has provided what you need to know state-by-state below.

- Illinois - read more here.
- Iowa - read more here.
- Indiana - read more here.
- Kansas - read more here.
- Missouri - read more here.
- Nebraska - read more here.
- Wisconsin - read more here.